What is Kinship Care?

Kinship Care refers to a temporary or permanent arrangement in which a relative - or any non-relative adult who had a long-standing relationship or bond with the child or family - has taken over full-time, substitute care of a child whose parents are unable or unwilling to do so. Reasons for this can include death or chronic illness, substance abuse, incarceration, domestic violence, child abuse or neglect, teenage pregnancy, unemployment, poverty or other problems. Kinship care includes those relationships established through an informal arrangement, a legal custody or guardianship order, a relative foster care placement or a kinship adoption. Regardless of the type of kinship care arrangement, the kinship caregivers' voluntary commitment to devote their lives to the children in their care is a courageous, life-changing decision.

The Value of a Kinship Caregiver

Kinship Caregiving Provides Permanency

When children are placed in out-of-home care, it is paramount that they are in an environment where there is permanency. Grandparents and other relatives raising children ensures safe, long-lasting and positive outcomes for the children.

Kinship Caregiving Provides Stability

A stable, structured home helps a child experience the love and care they need to function in society. A child raised in a stable environment will likely approach life with a strong central core!

Kinship Caregiving Provides Cultural Identity

A child with a strong cultural identity is more likely to have good mental health and well-being. Children with cultural identity connect well with others socially and develop a sense of belonging in their communities, even when the cultures are diverse.

The Value of Grandparents in the Life of a Child

Sense of History

Grandparents come with immense knowledge of life from their generation and personal history of one's own family. They have lived a life very different from their grandchildren, and have witnessed many changes over time. Conversing with grandparents about their lives, even learning tidbits of information, can provide a child with understanding into the past and with history of their own family background. A child can obtain a sense of where they have come from - a picture of where their own roots lie.

Wisdom that Shapes our Future

Many of our grandparents have lived through war-time days and the Great Depression. They know the challenges of the past, yet are able to pass down the wisdom, inner strength, and determination they used during those challenging times. Our grandparents lived full, eventful and resilient lives.

Perspective

The lives of grandparents provide us with perspective in knowing that these individuals got through difficult times and yet soared in living productive lives. We are grateful for grandparents because of their hard work, love and care.

Nurturing and Loving

Grandparents demonstrate a sense of calmness and peace which is beneficial to a child. Being in the presence of a grandparent can provide quality time that can be rewarding for both the grandchild and grandparent; this relationship is irreplaceable! A grandparent's patience and love can have a positive effect on grandchildren. When a child grows up they normally emulate the role models in their lives. The child will in fact implement some of the valuable lessons and traits they have learned from grandparents that will spill into their lives, careers, and relationships

Children and Opioid Epidemic

In the United States, opioid drug abuse has become a national public health crisis. Every day more than 115 people in the US die from opioid overdose. This issue impacts every race, gender, age group and income class. The problem in Ohio is especially alarming. Ohio currently has one of the nation's highest overdose rates – more than 4,000 Ohioans died from opioid drug overdose in 2017.

The users of opioids are not the only victims of the opioid epidemic. Children of opioid abusers are also victims of the epidemic that is destroying families and communities. It is estimated that 25% of children in the United States grow up in homes where substance abuse is present.

According to the county Public Children Services Agencies (PCSAO) Opiate Survey in April 2016, 50% of the children taken into custody in 2015 had parental drug use. At the time of removal, 28% of the children had parents actively using opiates including heroin.

- 70% of infants in child protection custody are in care due to their parent's opiate addiction.

Children are staying in foster care longer due to opiate recovery timelines and relapses.

- Within 1 year of recovery from opiates, 85% will typically relapse.
- Placement costs have increased 20% or $55 million from 2013 to 2016 due to more children in care and their needs being more complex.
- There was also a 62% increase with children in custody being placed with a relative.
- Successfully reunifying children of parents with opioid addiction requires much more intensive casework. Some local agencies report that more children are being placed in permanent custody than returning to parents.

KEEPING KIDS BUSY/VOLUNTEER OPPORTUNITIES

Many factors contribute to a child’s healthy self-esteem, which play a major role in the solid foundation of their development. When children are participating in activities they love, they are likely to meet peers that enjoy the same activities. Positive relationships are important in any child’s life; active children can develop positive relationships with adults and peers in a safe and structured environment. Being involved in loved activities will establish a path to gain confidence and learn teamwork.

Being socially active isn’t always a bad thing because children are learning character skills that will carry them through life. No matter what your child is into, you can find an activity that fits their interest and shows them that learning is fun. It will help them find a passion for activities from a young age. Not to mention avoiding the negative influence of “screen time”! Having busy children means you’ll be busy, too – taking them around; but watching them develop is well worth it.

SPIRITUAL GROWTH

Spiritual people are gracious, optimistic, compassionate, and self-actualized. Spiritualism, a search for something sacred, is an increasingly important topic to people today. Individuals approach the realm of spirituality through religion, meditation, yoga, and even personal reflection.

Why Be Spiritual? Five Benefits of Spirituality (according to Psychology Today):

- Spiritual people are gracious. Psychology has demonstrated that expressing gratitude is associated with many positive emotions such as optimism, being generous with time and resources, and overall vitality. Spirituality encourages people to be positive, which may be expressed in many of these life practices.
- Spiritual people are compassionate. Experiencing compassion toward others is one of the strongest correlations with living a spiritual life. A variety of positive or pro-social emotions have strong links to spiritualism, including allowing one to feel good about the little things in life and look at the world through empathetic eyes.
- Spiritual people flourish. Spirituality is linked to many important aspects of human functioning—spiritual people have positive relationships, high self-esteem, are optimistic, and have meaning and purpose in life.
- Spiritual people self-actualize. Spiritual individuals strive toward a better life and consider personal growth and fulfillment a central goal. Spirituality can be a path toward self-actualization, because it requires people to focus on their internal values and work on becoming a better individual.
- Spiritual people take time to savor life experiences. Individuals who value spirituality take the time to reflect on their daily activities and ultimately build lasting memories of their experiences. Because spiritual people are more conscious of small, daily activities, they experience positive emotions associated with the smaller pleasures in life.

In our “information age,” we need to assure that our children learn the critical thinking skills they need to understand, interpret and evaluate the messages they receive on a daily basis on TV, on-line and at the movies. The following organizations offer information geared to helping parents understand and make decisions about media and children.

COMPUTERS, INTERNET & SOCIAL MEDIA

Computers and tablets can be educational tools, as well as sources of entertainment to challenge children on many levels. Although most experiences children have online are positive, there is a risk of interacting with a harassing or even expletive, person or being exposed to inappropriate material. Blocking software that restricts access to certain sites and the ability to disclose personal information is available. However, it is also important to talk to your child and set firm expectations regarding the use of the internet, social media, and even smartphone applications.

Help With Expenses

Raising children is expensive. No matter how much you love the children in your care, you have to be practical. Before the children came to live with you, you probably had a budget which met your needs (or, at least, almost did). Now it may be strained to the breaking point. Help from government programs does exist.

The Ohio Department of Job and Family Services publishes a comprehensive “Ohio Resource Guide for Relatives Caring for Children”. This publication can be viewed online at the following link:

Qualifying Families Receive $1,000 Per Child

The Ohio Afterschool Child Enrichment (ACE) Educational Savings Account program provides funds to a student's parent or guardian to use on various enrichment and educational activities. The program is being offered through a contract between Merit International, Inc. and the Ohio Department of Education.

Here's how it works for parents, guardians, students and service providers.

Step 1: Complete the Application
Follow along the ACE Application Step-by-Step Guide for a walkthrough on the process of applying for ACE funds. This involves creating an OHJD account, requesting access to the Ohio ACE application and how to apply for the ACE Savings Account.

Step 2: Sign Up with Merit
After completing the Ohio ACE application (this entire process may take up to two weeks), qualifying parents and guardians will receive an email from Merit notifying them to sign up to receive access to their account funds. The email also will include a link to the Education Marketplace.

Step 3: Spend ACE Funds with Qualified Education Service Providers
Parents and guardians will be able to access the Education Marketplace to find providers in their areas after the account has been set up with Merit on ACEOhio.org.

OHIO WORKS FIRST (OWF)

Kinship caregivers and the children in their care can receive OWF, a monthly cash assistance program. In order to be eligible for OWF, you must be related by blood or marriage, or be legal guardian or custodian to the children in your care.

There are two ways that kinship caregivers can receive OWF benefits. The first way is for you to receive income only for the children in your care. In these cases, the County Department of Job and Family Services will not take into account any of your income and will not provide money for you as part of the OWF grant for the children. These are called child-only cases. You will generally be able to receive this money until the child turns 18 or leaves your home.

Kinship caregivers cannot receive KSP payments and OWF child-only grants at the same time for the same child. However, a kinship caregiver who receives KSP payments may apply for a child-only OWF grant when the KSP payments end if the kinship caregiver chooses not to become the certified foster parent.

If you have a child-only grant, you will not be impacted by many of the OWF requirements that you may have heard about (such as work requirements or time limits). However, in order to receive child-only OWF assistance, you must be willing to cooperate with child support requirements to ensure that the child's parents are held financially responsible. You should call a legal service provider if you have more specific questions about receiving this benefit.

The second way for you to receive OWF for the child(ren) in your care is to be part of the grant yourself. This means that county department of job and family services will look at your income, and if you are eligible for OWF, include you as part of the grant. You will receive more money because the grant will be for both you and the child(ren) in your care. However, the OWF work and time-limit requirements will apply to you. This means you will probably be required to work and will be limited to 3 years of OWF assistance. If you are not sure which type of grant to apply for it is a good idea to consult with a legal service provider. Most kinship caregivers receive child only grants and do not have to worry about work requirements and time limits. One problem many kinship caregivers face during the application process is proving that they are related to the child. You can generally use birth certificates to prove your relationship to the child. In complicated situations, you may need affidavits or other types of proof. If you are having trouble proving your relationship, you should seek help from a legal services provider.

You can apply for Ohio Works First online by going to Benefits.Ohio.gov, or by filling out the “Request for Cash, Food and Medical Assistance” (JFS 7200) form and submitting it to your county department of job and family services. You can get the form at your county agency or at www.odjfs.state.oh.us/forms/interfind.asp?forumnum=07200.

TAKE NOTE

You can apply for Ohio Works First at Lucas County Job & Family services. Please call (419) 213-8800 for more information or to request an application.

OWF - CHILD ONLY BENEFITS

The assistance is for the child only, and therefore the relative caregivers do not need to provide information about their financial situation. The caregiver is not applying for benefits with the child in this case. Therefore, the caregiver is not required to participate in the work program activities. In addition, there are no time limits on the benefits the child receives through Lucas County Job and Family services. Foster families do not receive OWF benefits because they receive a foster care payment from Children Services.

KINSHIP PERMANENCY INCENTIVE PROGRAM

The Kinship Permanency Incentive (KPI) program provides temporary financial support for minor children in the legal and physical custody of grandparents, relatives or other “kinship caregivers.” (Ohio law defines a kinship caregiver as any relative or non-relative adult who has a longstanding relationship or bond with the child and/or family.) The KPI program is designed to promote permanent commitments by kinship caregivers, by helping defray some of the costs of caring for children. KPI provides time-limited incentive payments to families caring for their kin. Eligible kinship caregivers will receive an initial payment to defray costs of initial placement and may receive subsequent payments at six-month intervals to support the stability of the child’s placement in the home. The maximum incentive amount may not exceed six payments and will not be provided for longer than thirty-six consecutive months. Participation in this program does not preclude these families from also receiving child-only Ohio Works First benefits. To apply, eligible kinship caregivers need to fill out an application at their local public children service agency. To be eligible for the Kinship Permanency Incentive, the following conditions must be met:

- A court must have awarded the kinship caregiver legal custody or guardianship of the child on or after July 1, 2005. Chapter 3: Finding Help with Expenses 16
- A public children service agency must have approved the placement and conducted a home assessment.
- The gross income of the caregiver’s family, including the child, may not exceed 300 percent of the federal poverty guidelines.

KINSHIP SUPPORT PROGRAM

The Kinship Support Program (KSP) was signed into law on December 29, 2020. The purpose of the program is to provide payments to eligible kinship caregivers who care for children placed in their home. The payments will be provided for several months, to allow time for the caregiver to become certified as a foster parent if they choose. Once certified, the caregiver will receive foster care per diem payments for the child placed in their care. Kinship caregivers are eligible for KSP payments when:

- The child is in the temporary, permanent or legal custody of the PCSA;
- The PCSA places the child in the home of the kinship caregiver, as a kinship placement; and
- The kinship caregiver is not already certified as a foster caregiver.

As of January, 2021, eligible kinship caregivers will initially receive a payment of $10.20 per day per child. This amount will change every January based on the cost-of-living adjustment. Kinship caregivers may receive these payments for the length of time specified below, depending on when the child was placed in their home:

- For not more than nine months if the child was placed in the home on or before December 29, 2020.
- For not more than nine months if the child was placed in the home between Dec. 29, 2020 and Sep. 29, 2021.
- For not more than six months if the child was placed in the home on or after September 30, 2021.

Kinship caregivers will receive KSP payments until they become certified foster parents, until the child is no longer placed in the home, or until the timeframe described above has ended, whichever happens first.

To become a foster parent for the children in their home, kinship caregivers may be able to receive waivers of non-safety-related foster care requirements. This may include training classes or other requirements that may be a barrier to certification. A representative from the foster care agency can discuss non-safety waivers with the caregiver during the homestudy process. For more information about beginning the process to become a foster parent, please visit the following website: <https://fosterandadopt.jfs.ohio.gov/wps/portal/gov/ofc/foster-care/becoming-a-foster-parent>.

KINSHIP GUARDIAN ASSISTANCE PROGRAM (KGAP)

New in 2023. Are you caring for a child placed in your home by a children services agency? Are you interested in receiving legal custody of this child? If so, you may be able to receive monthly subsidy payment and Medicaid to assist in the care of that child until the age of 18. You may be eligible for KGAP if you meet these criteria:

- The child was placed in your home by a children services agency that holds custody.
- You and the child have a strong attachment and you are committed to caring for this child.
- You are willing to become a licensed foster parent, or you are already a licensed foster parent.
- You are willing to take legal custody of the child and are not interested in adoption.

Contact your local children services agency or speak with your caseworker about KGAP.

CHILD SUPPORT

A child has the legal right to financial support and benefits (such as insurance, Social Security, inheritance) from both parents. A child support obligation includes medical and spousal support. In Ohio, each county has a Child Support Enforcement Agency (CSEA). Any parent or custodian with minor children who needs or is owed child support can get help from CSEA, regardless of income. You may reference more information on child support and assistance provided by a CSEA on pages 38-40 of this guide.

FOOD ASSISTANCE

If you are eligible, you can use Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP) benefits (formerly known as food stamps) instead of cash to buy food at the grocery store. The benefits are approved and placed on a plastic debit card (Ohio Direction Card) that can be used anywhere in the US. You may use the card by swiping it and entering your personal identification number (PIN). The amount of your purchase will then be automatically deducted from your account.

No sales tax is charged on Food Assistance purchases. These benefits cannot be used to buy non-food items such as soap, diapers, alcohol or tobacco, or hot food purchases that are prepared to be eaten immediately.

You can apply for Food Assistance online by going to www.Benefits.Ohio.gov, or by filling out the "Application for Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP), Cash Assistance, Medical Assistance, or Child Care Assistance" (JFS 7200) form and submitting it to your County Department of Job and Family services. You can get the form at your county agency or at <http://www/odjfs.state.oh.us/forms/interfind.asp?formum=7200>.

Your county Department of Job and Family Services will decide whether you are eligible by looking at the gross income and counted liquid assets of everyone in the household. Gross income includes almost all cash income, except things like loans and student financial aid. Counted liquid assets include cash, checking and savings accounts. Resources do not include the value of your home or residence, your vehicle or your furnishings. If you have a child-only OWF grant for the children in your care, your income and assets may be too high for your family to obtain Food Assistance. Still, if you think you might be eligible, you should apply for both programs.

If your household is in a crisis situation, you may be able to get expedited Food Assistance within seven days. You qualify for expedited assistance if (1) the members of your household have a combined monthly income of $100, (2) your income and resources are not enough to pay the rent or mortgage and utilities this month, or (3) your household is homeless.

 Note: For expedited Food Assistance, only identification is required for verification. If you anticipate having trouble with the applications process or getting to the store to use your benefits, you can designate an "authorized representative" to act on your behalf. In that case, the authorized representative also must present identification.*

Post Adoption Special Services Subsidy (PASSS): offers eligible families financial assistance to help pay for the treatment of a child's physical, developmental, mental or emotional condition - most often, mental health, respite care and counseling services. Ohio has been nationally recognized for this innovative program. Please contact your county PSCA for more information.

Adoption Assistance: The Adoption Assistance Program provides federal funds to states to facilitate the timely placement of children whose special needs or circumstances would otherwise make it difficult to place them with adoptive families. Families eligible for Adoption Assistance receive a monthly subsidy; each subsidy is paid for with a combination of federal, state and, in some instances, local funds. Children receiving this benefit may be entitled to other assistance as well, including Medicaid coverage. Please contact your county PCSA for more information.

State Adoption Assistance Program: Is a state of Ohio financial assistance program that provides monthly maintenance subsidies to families who adopt children with special needs who are ineligible for the federal Adoption Assistance Program. Children who qualify for the State Adoption Subsidy Program may also be eligible for Medicaid coverage. Public children services agencies are responsible for determining eligibility for the State Adoption Subsidy Program, and for administering it. The family's income is taken into consideration when determining eligibility for this program.

STABLE ACCOUNTS

What is a STABLE Account?

A STABLE Account is an investment account available to eligible individuals with disabilities. STABLE Accounts are made possible by the federal Achieving a Better Life Experience ("ABLE") Act. STABLE Accounts allow individuals with disabilities to save and invest money without losing eligibility for certain public benefits programs, like Medicaid or SSI. Earnings in your STABLE Account are not subject to federal income tax, so long as you spend them on "Qualified Disability Expenses."

STABLE Accounts have similar features to normal bank accounts, but they are not checking or savings accounts. STABLE Accounts are investment accounts, similar to 529 college savings accounts or 401(k) retirement accounts. When you deposit money into your STABLE Account, your money will be invested in different options that you choose. While you can still withdraw and spend your money whenever you need it, a STABLE Account also allows you to grow your money and to save long-term for disability expenses.

Early Childhood Education

Quality early childhood education programs help prepare children for subsequent success. Programs should be child-centered or "developmental," emphasizing learning through play and activities.

Early childhood education programs are operated in many settings. Some programs are run by local schools; others are operated by non-profit groups such as churches and charitable organizations; still others are provided by employers or are privately owned.

Often full-day programs are called child care, while part-time programs are called preschools or nursery schools.

If you're planning to enroll your child in an early childhood education program, be sure to evaluate the program's affiliations and the credentials of the teachers, ask other parents for references and use the following checklist to help you make an informed decision.

- Is the facility licensed by the state for health and safety?
- Do the content and materials of the preschool program reflect cultural diversity and nonsexist attitudes?
- Do the goals address all areas of a child's development, including social, emotional, intellectual and physical?
- What is the student-teacher ratio? Are the teachers trained in early childhood education? Do they express warmth, interest and respect for each child?
- How are disciplinary problems handled?
- Is parental input welcome and encouraged?
- Does the staff communicate regularly with parents?
- Is there an outdoor area for safe, vigorous activities?
- Are children always supervised when outdoors?

As noted previously throughout this section, the YWCA Child Care Resource and Referral Center can assist in locating and choosing child care opportunities.

There are many agencies, facilities and independent providers that offer childcare programs and services.

Information and resources are available to help locate and choose a quality head start program, pre-school, early childhood educational program, school-age program or childcare for a child in your care. The following agencies offer assistance:

HEAD START FOR PRESCHOOLERS

When a preschool age child comes to live with you, many questions come to mind. How can I be sure the child gets a good start mentally and physically? How do I care for a toddler properly without wearing myself out? How can I prepare this child for elementary school? Enrolling a child in Head Start may be the answer to these and other questions.

Head Start is a federal program for preschool children from low-income families and/or with disabilities. The program receives its funding from the Department of Health and Human Services. Head Start enrollment is open to 3 and 4 year old children and 5 year old children not yet eligible for kindergarten. Children who attend Head Start participate in a variety of educational activities. They have healthy meals and snacks and may also receive free medical and dental care. Services for children with special needs include speech and language therapy, individual services, and hearing screenings.

The Early Head Start program in Lucas County began in 2014 through the Lucas County Head Start Collaborative. The program allows the youngest of the County's at risk children to receive services as early as birth and to prepare them for a transition into preschool or the traditional Head Start program at age 3.

Early Head Start provides support to families including health and developmental screenings, medical and dental services, parent education, and family goal-setting. We believe – and research supports -- that if quality, comprehensive services start early and continue through preschool, children will be better prepared for school and parents will be better prepared to guide their children's everyday learning. SCHOOL-AGE CHILD CARE

Because school-age children spend so much of their time outside school, children ages 5-13 whose parents work outside of the home are in need of some type of supervision after school, and sometimes before school, on holidays, and during school vacations. Many solutions for this type of care that can be found in settings such as child care centers, family child care homes, schools, churches, recreation centers, and other community agencies. In addition, many organizations sponsor a before and after school program for their students.

SELF-CARE FOR KIDS

Many youngsters are classified as "latchkey" children who let themselves into their own homes after school when parents or caregivers are not yet home from work. Ohio has no law that establishes a specific age at which it's okay to leave a child alone. There are many issues

(Although developed for centers, many of these guidelines are appropriate for evaluating other types of child care, such as a family home care setting.)

- Are healthy meals and snacks offered to the children? _____

and potential risks involved with a child staying on his own, so you should consider if a child has demonstrated an appropriate level of maturity and past evidence of responsible behavior and good judgement before deciding that this is appropriate. If possible, begin self-care on a trial basis and increase the child's alone time gradually. Following are some suggestions to help make self-care successful.

- Clearly write and post the following:
 - Rules and responsibilities during self-care (homework, household chores, snack preparation, and answering the phone and door).
 - Emergency phone numbers
 - Telephone number of a neighborhood adult
- If the child is to care for another child, clearly explain the roles and responsibilities of each child.
- Role play with your child using potentially difficult situations (someone at the door, fire, an injury, lost key, etc.) and allow your child to practice what to do. This gives you an opportunity to help educate your child about appropriate choices and actions.
- Talk about your child's fears about self-care.
- Provide activities and materials for your child to use during self-care to eliminate boredom. Address the use of television, the computer, tablet, etc.

SCHOOL-AGE PROGRAMS

School-age child care programs are often offered in centers as part of a larger child care program, or may exist as a stand-alone program. Good school-age care requires essentially the same criteria as preschool child care – a safe, secure, and comfortable environment is needed where children have contact with caring, well-trained adults who address and nurture their needs and interests. Stimulating activities and opportunities for quiet time should be offered. Children should look forward to attending the program, which should feel more like home than school.

When looking for a program be sure to ask about policies on holidays and sick children. Also ask if the program is licensed and/or accredited. When seeking a school-age child care program, inquire at your child's school and child care center, as well as your community center. Several local programs provide tutoring for elementary and high school students.

Babysitting and Occasional Care

As with all types of child care, you should be cautious when choosing a babysitter for the occasional care of children. Choose a sitter who has training in child care and first aid (including CPR) from a qualified source. Ask friends and neighbors for recommendations, and always check references before hiring a babysitter. Use a babysitter checklist to relay important information to your babysitter. See page 15 for an example babysitter checklist.

HELP YOUR CHILD SUCCEED AT SCHOOL

Parental involvement in a child's education is critical. Research consistently reveals that high student achievement and self-esteem are closely related to positive parental participation in education.

You can be involved in your child's education many ways such as joining the PTA, PTO or school council, volunteering in classrooms, insisting on regular school attendance and helping with homework. Most importantly, be your child's first teacher by spending time with them and reading to them. Talk to your child's teacher and contact these resources for ideas and guidance on how to get involved.

PROGRAM EXAMPLE

Getting In-Kind Gifts and Pro-Bono Services for Kinship/Grandfamilies. Two Examples from: AgeSpan and Area Office on Aging of Northwestern Ohio, Inc. www.agespan.org and www.areaofficeonaging.com

Since 1997, AgeSpan, an Area Agency on Aging, has partnered with other organizations working with older adults to establish the Breakfast Exchange Club of Greater Haverhill under the arm of the National Exchange Club. Club members support the community by fundraising to support the needs of older adults. The Breakfast Exchange Club helps pay for “specific needs” that are outside the AAA’s kinship/grandfamily budget such as holiday gifts for grandparents and their grandchildren, grocery store gift cards, summer camp fees, and other extracurricular activities for children. The Breakfast Exchange Club has also helped a grandchild with vision loss attend a summer camp on Martha’s Vineyard and paid for another grandchild to participate in a cheerleading competition in Florida.

Over time, AAAs can turn one or two partnerships into many. That’s what the Area Office on Aging of Northwestern Ohio, Inc. did. The AAA has served kinship/grandfamilies for 20 years and supports more than 1,100 kinship/grandfamilies. In this time, the agency has cultivated cost-neutral partnerships with many organizations, including more than 60 nonprofits, managed care plans, government agencies, and universities. These partners offer a variety of free goods and/or pro-bono services to the kinship/grandfamilies the AAA serves. For example, one nonprofit partner provides free winter coats to children in kinship/grandfamilies. Managed care partners pay for turkeys and hams during the holidays. Other partners help with gift cards, school supplies, space for AAA events, minor league baseball and hockey tickets, and pro bono legal assistance for the families.

When asked how other AAAs and Title VI programs can replicate its success, Collette Cordova, Vice President of Special Contracts and Analytics at the Area Office on Aging of Northwestern Ohio, Inc. suggested they build and nurture relationships at the local level by engaging in meaningful outreach activities. She also encouraged AAAs and Title VI programs to find opportunities to teach other entities about kinship/grandfamilies. Requests to partners, she says, may start small and build over time.

Making a Difference

This month, we're spotlighting kinship programs making a difference in their communities.

Extending Program Reach: The Northwest Ohio Area Office on Aging

Arcelia Armstrong and Marsha Rose are a dynamic pair of social workers who make you believe anything is possible. Along with another colleague, they are the Kinship Navigator Program at the Northwest Ohio Area Office on Aging, and they've put together an impressive network of partnerships that greatly extends their reach.

How are grandfamily and kin caregivers referred for services? Referrals come from the YMCA, the court system, school nurses, neighbors, food banks, and places of worship. Caregivers must be residents of the County and the primary caregivers of children aged 18 and under. There are no caregiver age, income, or legal custody requirements.

What services are offered? The program offers referrals and assistance to help caregivers. Staff conduct an intake assessment and then follow-up with each family. They update their 64-page resource guide for all family caregivers every other year, and it includes resources for kinship/grandfamilies.

How did this begin? More than two decades ago, Ohio's child welfare agency (referred to as ODJFS) made specific funds available to address the needs of kinship families. For many organizations, the end of the grant marked the end of the services. For the Northwest Ohio Area Office on Aging, it was just the beginning.

Where does ongoing funding come from? Current funding comes from the federal National Family Caregiver Support Program as well as local levies and agencies, including the county child welfare agency.

What services are grandfamily and kin caregivers referred to? Partners provide legal assistance, financial assistance, transportation, food, mental health services, childcare, education, housing, furniture, and clothing. More than 1,000 caregivers received assistance in 2022.

What are some examples of goods and services that partners donate for the families? In-kind and monetary donations cover sports tickets, camp scholarships, winter coats, school supplies, funds for farmer's market tokens, holiday hams and turkeys, and farm-fresh food delivery.

- Take a walk in the woods. See how many different leaf shapes you can find.
- Count anything and everything: how many steps, how many carrots in the bag, how many days until the next holiday.
- Work on sorting skills over the laundry basket.
- Give your child an alarm clock. You'll go a long way toward building responsibility if you put your child in charge of getting up in the morning.
- Buy a family calendar. Write down due dates for homework and big tests. Your child can look at the calendar to decide how to spend his/her time to get everything done.

Secondary:

- Talk to your child about current events. Ask questions. Even better, ask for his/her opinions.
- Subscribe to magazines (or find them at the library) that relate to his/her special interests. For example: sports, videogames, or fashion.
- Make sure your pre-teen/teen gets enough sleep and healthy foods. At this age they're tempted to stay up too late and eat too much junk food, both of which can affect learning.
- Discuss finances. If your student has a job, help him/her establish a budget that includes some savings. Open savings and checking accounts for your child.
- Be alert to any drastic changes in mood, behavior, friends, and /or grades. Such changes could indicate drug or alcohol use. Seek help, including from your child's school.
- Praise your child as often as possible. This will ultimately help him/her function well in a complex and demanding world.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS

The state of Ohio is working to raise expectations and accountability in its public schools. The Ohio Department of Education is required to issue "report cards" to school districts in Ohio. This report card provides a performance accountability rating based on standards such as proficiency test results, student attendance rates, and dropout rates. Call your school district or the Department of Education Hotline for information on how well your local schools are doing. You can receive detailed information about the district's overall results (including report cards for individual schools within the district), strategies that are planned for improving performance, and ways you can become involved in those efforts.

EXCEPTIONAL LEARNERS

Exceptional students differ from average or normal children in physical, mental, learning, emotional, or social characteristics and abilities and may need special educational programs or services. They include students with physical or mental handicaps, communications disorders, learning disabilities and emotional disturbance, as well as gifted students. Because of family problems, many children being raised by grandparents are exceptional children.

The Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA) is a federal law that requires a free, appropriate education for children with disabilities. An important right you have is participation in the development of your child's Individualized Education Plan (IEP) or, in the case of a child under school-age, an Individualized Family Service Plan (IFSP). The IEP and the IFSP are written statements of the educational program designed to meet your child's unique needs. Grandparents and other relative caregivers may find that the child in their care faces challenging educational experiences. They must, therefore, understand the rights and protections available to children in the public schools. Your child, because of genetic make-up, life experiences and/or self-image, may struggle with traditional educational settings and goals. If they exhibit learning, behavior, and/or social problems they may qualify for federally mandated identification and individualized services. Once identified, these children are eligible to receive appropriate instruction, interventions, and other related services. The Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA) guarantees children with disabilities, from ages three to 21, free and appropriate public education (FAPE) designed to meet their specific needs.

Grandparents and other relative caregivers can effectively seek school intervention by writing a request for intervention support or an evaluation. This letter should be mailed to your child's school principal and to the special education administrator of the district. Once received, the school district must act upon the request. Under The Individuals with Disabilities Education Act, school districts must complete action within 90 days after receipt of the request. Testing must be completed, reported and if eligible, a special education plan developed within that timeframe. To be eligible for the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act, the child must fall into one of the designated categories:

- Mental retardation
- Hearing impairments
- Speech or language impairment
- Visual impairment
- Serious emotional disturbance
- Orthopedic treatment
- Autism
- Traumatic brain injury
- Specific learning disabilities
- Developmental delay for children 3 to 9
- Other health impairments

LEARNING DIFFERENCES

If your child is of average or above intelligence but displays a discrepancy between their potential and actual performance in school and has difficulty with math concepts, listening skills, retaining information or reading comprehension, they may have a learning disability. A learning disability occurs because of problems with the way the brain handles information, which hinders the normal learning process. Having a learning disability means that learning is difficult despite a child's best attempts, and it often causes the child to suffer low self-esteem in the face of repeated failure.

There are many types of learning disabilities including dyslexia (problems with reading), dysgraphia (problems with writing), dyscalculia (problems doing math) and auditory memory and processing disabilities (problems understanding and remembering words and sounds).

Reading is an important skill for children to learn. It encourages language development, and to a large degree, determines school success. There are many ways that you can encourage a love of reading in your child:

- Read to preschool children at least 20 minutes each day (or have older children read to you).
- Set a good example by letting children see you read.
- If you have difficulty reading, tell your child stories.
- Keep good books, newspapers and magazines in your home.
- Help your child get a library card and use it!

Libraries and book stores also help promote a love of reading through free programs for children such as story time, author readings, illustrator workshops and other activities.

UNDERSTANDING LEGAL TERMS

When a child comes to live with you... When an adult, other than a parent, assumes responsibility for a child, many legal relationships are created. Each one carries certain privileges, benefits, rights and responsibilities. You will no doubt want to consult an attorney at some point to help you sort out what course of action you will take regarding the child and yourself. Understanding the following legal terms and relationships will help to get you started.

■ PHYSICAL POSSESSION

The child or children simply come to live with you – it's an informal arrangement. No legal arrangements are made to transfer custody from the birth parent or legal guardian and no agency has officially placed the child with you or others. The biological parent is still the decision maker for the child.

■ GUARDIANSHIP

Guardianship can only be granted by the courts. It is an action that can only be filed in the Probate Court. The Court can award guardianship for any length of time, from a few months to an indefinite period. The guardianship can be over the person, virtually the same as custody, or it can be only over the estate having the guardianship of the money of the minor child or both. A guardianship requires the posting of a bond, the amount is determined by the Court, and usually requires yearly accountings to be filed detailing how the money of the minor child (ward) has been spent. The kinship caregiver, as the guardian, would have the right to make most decisions. A change or termination of a guardianship would have to be granted by a Court.

■ LEGAL CUSTODY

Custody can only be granted by the Courts. Usually it is the juvenile court, but other courts also can award custody. The Court can award custody for any length of time, from a few months to several years. Legal custody is an arrangement that gives the caregiver rights to make most decisions and allows stability for the child. When someone has legal custody they can also be called the "custodial parents" or "custodian." If a court grants legal custody, then only the court can change custody.

■ PERMANENT CUSTODY

Permanent custody may be granted to Lucas County Children Services by the court when all other suitable relative resources have been exhausted. Rarely does the court grant permanent custody to a kinship caregiver. Often times, kinship caregivers will believe they have permanent custody. Or a caregiver may just have legal custody and think they have permanent custody. When Children Services has permanent custody, the birth parents have lost all rights to the child. Children Services can also place the child for adoption. Childrens Services and the foster parents are the legal decision makers for the child.

■ ADOPTION

Adoption is another permanent custodial transfer. By adopting, the Kinship caregiver becomes the legal parent and is fully responsible for the child. The adoptive parent obtains the same rights and responsibilities as a

IF YOU CAN'T AFFORD AN ATTORNEY

Legal Services: Also known as Legal Aid, these law offices help low income people with legal problems. The lawyers tend to be overworked, but may know a lot about your kind of case.

Law School Clinics: Law schools may have a clinic that represents kinship caregivers in child welfare or custody cases. A law student will work with you, supervised by an experienced lawyer. Contact a law school in your community to see if services are available.

A Pro Bono Lawyer: Sometimes private lawyers will work for free, or for a reduced fee, if a case will help more than just one family. If you are trying to change an unfair law or challenge an unfair state policy, you might find an interested lawyer. Call the Ohio Bar Association at 614-487-2050 or the Toledo Bar Association at 419-242-9363 to see if a pro bono attorney is available and willing to discuss your case.

natural parent. At this point, all obligations and rights of the birth parents are severed, and the adoptive parents are the decision makers for the child.

WHAT IS LEGAL CUSTODY?

If you are an adult kinship caregiver, court-ordered legal custody can give you certain rights and responsibilities with respect to the child you are raising. Legal custody will allow you to:

- Provide emotional support for the child.
- Determine where and with whom the child will live.
- Make many of the major decisions regarding the child's care, upbringing, education and medical needs.
- Provide food, shelter, education and ordinary medical care for the child.
- Protect and discipline the child.

Legal custody is not limited to parents and blood relatives. If it is best for the emotional and physical well-being of the child, the court may award legal custody to an unrelated person who has demonstrated a willingness and ability to raise the child.

When a child is born, the mother automatically has legal custody - and so does the father, if they are married. Kinship caregivers, however, must go to a court to get legal custody of the children in their care.

TYPES OF LEGAL CUSTODY

A Custody Order. If a judge issues you a custody order, this means you will be responsible for the child's day-to-day care but the parents will continue to have a legal relationship with the child. They will have a right to visit (unless the judge says they cannot) and could someday ask a judge to return custody to them.

Guardianship. If you are appointed the child's legal guardian, this means you will be given day-to-day responsibility for the child, while the parents keep some rights. The main difference between a custody order and guardianship is that guardianship is usually granted in the probate court, with different rules.

Adoption. If you adopt the child, you will become the child's legal parent in every way. The legal relationship between the child and the child's birth parents will end, and you will decide if and when they will visit. The birth parents will never again have the right to ask a judge to send the children back to them, except in extremely rare situations during the first year after an adoption decree is issued.

TAKE NOTE

If you are making arrangements to adopt, make sure that you clearly understand what services are or are not provided, or are provided at additional costs in your adoption agreement. Make sure that you understand the payment requirements, including non-refundable fees. Adoption is a life-long commitment. Consultation with an attorney who specializes in adoption case law is likely to be a wise investment.

TWO OTHER OPTIONS

If you are a grandparent currently caring for your grandchild, but you do not have legal custody or guardianship and are unable to make decisions about and access educational and medical services for your grandchild, there are two other ways you can obtain "care, physical custody and control": a Power of Attorney or a Caretaker Authorization Affidavit.

Power of Attorney (POA)

Allows you to:

- Authorize your grandchild's enrollment in school.
- Access educational information.
- Be involved in the child's educational planning.
- Provide consent for educational activities.
- Arrange for the child's routine and emergency medical, dental and psychological treatment.

If you have questions about obtaining a Power of Attorney, call the Ohio Department of Job and Family Services' Kinship Program Coordinator at (614) 466-1213. POA form can be found on page 56 of the Appendix.

Caretaker Authorization Affidavit (CAA)

If you have tried but failed to locate your grandchild's parents after making reasonable efforts to do so, you may obtain a Caretaker Authorization Affidavit. The Caretaker Authorization Affidavit allows you temporarily to:

- Authorize your grandchild's enrollment in school.
- Access educational information.
- Be involved in the child's educational planning.
- Provide consent for educational activities.
- Arrange for the child's routine and emergency medical, dental and psychological treatment.

■ WHAT IS FOSTER CARE

Foster Care is a federally mandated program administered by public children services agencies and supervised by the Ohio Department of Job and Family Services. The purpose of foster care is to provide a safe environment for children and youth who temporarily cannot live with their families. The goal of foster care is to safely return the child to the parents or, when that is not possible, move the child into an adoptive or permanent home. In cases where a court has found a child to be abused or neglected, the court may certify a related caregiver or family friend as the foster parent.

Once a child is formally placed with a relative or friend who has been officially approved and licensed as a foster parent, the public children services agency (not the caregiver) maintains legal custody over the child. In the eyes of the law, the public children services agency is considered the legal custodian of the child and has ultimate control over all decisions concerning the child,

LEGAL NOTE

If there is no form of legal custody established, kinship caregivers need a legal power of attorney to obtain medical care for children in their care.

🌟 IMPORTANT DOCUMENTS

Grandparents raising grandchildren need to have detailed records of their financial status, as well as that of their grandchildren for a number of important reasons.

Insurance

- Medicare card
- Secondary health
- Life
- Special care
- Long term care
- Catastrophic illness
- Auto
- Home

Child Care

- Financial aid forms
- Recent photographs and fingerprints of child

Legal

- Auto title
- Deeds

It is important to make a list of where these documents are kept. You should also make a copy of this list and give it to a trusted family member and/or friend.

For Kinship Caregivers, it is equally important to document the legal status of custody for children in their care and to state who is best able to assume child rearing should they (the caregivers) become incapacitated or die.

REVIEW THIS LIST ANNUALLY!

including the decision to keep or not to keep the child in the caregiver's home. While the foster caregiver does not have legal authority unless legal custody, guardianship or adoption is pursued.

■ PERMANENT CUSTODY

Permanent custody is usually granted to Children Services by the court when the birth parents will not be reunited with the child. Lucas County Children Services staff is the legal decision-maker for the child(ren).

CHILD SUPPORT

A child has the legal right to financial support and benefits (such as insurance, Social Security, inheritance) from both parents. A child support obligation includes child, medical and spousal support. In Ohio, each county has a Child Support Enforcement Agency (CSEA). Any parent or custodian with minor children who needs or is owed child support can get help from CSEA, regardless of income.

TAKE NOTE

You are now able to track parents who don't pay child support. The Ohio Department of Job and Family Services has a computerized collection system. The computer allows county CSEAs to communicate about how much money is owed, how much has been paid and where the parent works and lives. The system also processes checks.

The following services are available from CSEA:

- Collecting child support
- Helping establish support and medical insurance orders
- Disbursing child support checks
- Establishing paternity in cases of out-of-wedlock birth
- Enforcing child support orders
- Locating absent parents and their assets
- Conducting Administrative hearings to review child support orders
- Submitting names and locations of chronic non-paying parents to the county prosecutor for further action
- Providing certain services to alimony-only cases

🔍 CUSTODY REFERENCE CHART

WHO DECIDES WHERE TO PLACE THE CHILD

RIGHTS AND RESPONSIBILITIES OF BIRTH PARENTS

Informal Arrangement

Birth parent decides.

Birth parent retains legal responsibility

Legal Custody

Court awards custody. Children Services involvement not necessary. Relative may petition for custody. Only court can change custody. If Children Services files for custody, reunification plan must be developed (see Foster Placement below).

Visitation based on court order. Birth parent kept informed of child's medical condition, legal proceedings, and placement moves. Birth parent responsible for child support

Guardianship

Probate Court awards guardianship and approves the guardian.

Visitation based on court order or arrangement with guardian. Birth parent receives notice of legal actions involving the child, is informed of placement and may be responsible for child support

Foster Placement

Children Services places child in foster home based on case plan. Usually done when all kinship resources are exhausted. Birth parent can get child back if progress on reunification plan made.

Birth parent has right to visit based on "best interest of child," determined by Children Services or the court. Birth parent contacted about health matters and pays child support.

Permanent Custody

Court awards custody to Children Services, who decides course of action, subject to court's approval. Rare that kinship caregiver gets permanent custody. Birth parents' rights severed and they have no right to visitation.

Children Services removes the child from birth parents. Seeks permanent custody, because reunification efforts have not been successful, and court agrees. Birth parent no longer pays child support nor has rights to the child.

Adoption

Court determines if placement and adoption are in the child's best interest.

Birth parents' rights terminated. They have no obligation to pay support nor have they rights to visit the child.

If a child is born to unmarried parents, establishing paternity is vital to protecting the child's claim to his/her father's assets. If paternity has not been voluntarily established, an administrative hearing can be conducted by a hearing officer at the CSEA. Once paternity is legally established, the court can issue an order for child support. Child support continues until the child is 18 and has graduated from high school. A state-mandated formula is used to calculate the amount of support.

Support can be withheld from wages or taken directly from the parent's bank account. The court or the CSEA can also make arrangements to withhold from other sources, such as Workers Compensation, certain Social Security benefits, pensions or annuities.

If the non-custodial parent fails to supply the support required, the CSEA can take any of the following actions:

- Report non-payment to the Credit Bureau
- Require the IRS to seize federal/state income tax refunds
- A lien can be placed on property of the parent
- The non-supporting parent can be put in jail

As an alternative to the efforts of CSEA, you may also hire a private attorney to work on enforcement of child support orders. Some collection agencies will also perform these services, usually for a percentage of what they collect. If you are considering these options, understand exactly what the fee structure is—what will be charged and for what results. If you need to locate a missing parent, sometimes hiring a private investigator for a flat fee is the least expensive option.

WILLS AND TRUSTS

Legal experts recommend that everyone, and especially those with minor children, have a legal will. A Will is a document which declares how you want your assets distributed after your death. It also establishes who will care for your children. It is especially important for grandparents raising grandchildren, and essential if you have adopted any grandchildren. Many older adults made wills several years ago but have not updated them. When grandparents assume responsibility for a grandchild, it is important that arrangements are made to take care of the child after their death. The choice of an executor needs to be made. An Executor is the individual who will be in charge of carrying out the wishes in your will.

If you have minor children, you should always name a Guardian of their persons and property. You should also name alternate guardians. It is important to inform the guardian(s) of their prospective status before you actually name them in a will. Guardians are not legally obligated to provide for the children out of their own pockets.

A Living Will allows a person with a terminal illness to have some control over the kind of medical treatment he/she will receive. It is a written document stating a person's preference regarding the use of extraordinary measures to extend life when there is no hope of recovery. It becomes active with the loss of a person's mental competence and/or the ability to communicate due to disease or injury. It provides the opportunity to state conditions under which you wish medical treatment given or withheld and the type of treatment to be considered.

Another consideration is to set up a Trust. A trust provides a means of managing money for children who may not have the maturity or financial responsibility to handle an inheritance. Trusts, though, are not for everyone. Funding a trust means transferring assets such as your home, car, or bank accounts into the legal entity—trust—from your own name. Assets are then owned by the trust, not you, although you can still keep control over them by naming yourself the trustee. Upon your death, a named successor will take over management of the trust on terms you can specify. There are both changeable and non-changeable (revocable and non-revocable) trusts, each of which have differing effects on taxes and government benefits.

Remember that, although most of these documents can be done personally, you should still consult with an attorney for advice on what best fits your needs. Be sure to find an attorney who is experienced in these matters, and with one whom you feel comfortable. A good starting point is the local Bar Association or Legal Aid Society.

Medical Services and Wellness

This section contains information and resources about physical and mental health. Did you know that taking care of your mental/emotional health is just as important to a long healthy life as taking care of your physical health? Did you know that it is just as important for the doctor to do a mental status exam as it is to do a physical status exam? Just like physical health, mental health can effect motivation, energy level and other tasks related to daily functioning.

CHOOSING A DOCTOR

Regular visits with a doctor are key to preventing health problems in children, so it's important to establish a positive relationship between doctor, parent and child. Before choosing a doctor for your child, consider developing a list of candidates and calling each for a get-acquainted interview.

Family Physicians: Specially trained to provide continuing and comprehensive medical care, health maintenance and preventative services to each member of the family. A family physician is a specialist who serves as your advocate in all health-related matters, including the appropriate use of consultants, health services and community resources.

Pediatricians: Trained to manage and prevent health problems in infants, children, adolescents and young adults. Pediatric training requires specialized education after medical school that enables a pediatrician to serve a child's needs from growth and development to nutrition and physical fitness to illnesses and injuries.

Check with your health insurance plan to see if you are required to choose an in-network provider from their approved list. The resource that follows may also help in your search.

DENTAL CARE

Healthy teeth and gums for children is more important than most people think. Healthy baby teeth help your child learn to speak as well as learn to chew and swallow food. Cavities in baby teeth can be painful and can lead to malnutrition, delayed growth, and lower scores on school work. A child should begin going to the dentist by their first birthday and every 6 months afterwards. Children are more likely to develop good dental hygiene habits if they see the adults in their family taking care of their teeth too. It is important to find a Dental Home for the entire family. Regular dental care along with daily home care are the best ways to have a lifetime of healthy smiles. Numerous dentists will provide dental care to children. The insurance companies will provide lists of in network dentists to members. Dental care is also provided at:

WELL CHILD CARE AND IMMUNIZATIONS

Well child care involves a regular schedule of visits to the doctor to check a child's physical and developmental progress and administer immunizations. Usually a child is seen by a doctor several times within the first couple months after birth, then every three months until 2 years of age, then annually. Talk to your doctor about the appropriate schedule for your child.

Regular checkups by the doctor are an important part of preventive health care as the doctor tracks your child's growth and development and identifies physical problems before they become serious. These visits also allow your child to establish a relationship with his/her health care provider and gives you a chance to discuss issues or ask questions at your child's different developmental points.

Your child will also receive immunizations at these regular checkups with his doctor. These vaccines help children develop immunity against potentially deadly or disabling diseases and also reduce the risk of spreading disease to others.

Health Departments and other organizations offer low-cost or free shots. No one is turned away because of the inability to pay. Many offer well child care clinics or assist with securing prenatal and well child care for infants. Call for clinic days and times.

BUILD RESILIENCE

DISABILITIES & SPECIAL NEEDS

“Special needs” is a general term that describes children with a variety of chronic health-related conditions such as cystic fibrosis, sickle cell, diabetes, asthma, or a developmental or behavioral disability.

A developmental disability is a mental or physical impairment, or a combination of both, that first appears during a person’s developmental years, before age 22. It usually lasts a lifetime.

Examples of conditions that are developmental disabilities are epilepsy, cerebral palsy, mental retardation, spina bifida, specific learning disability, sensory impairments (visual and hearing), autism and Tourette syndrome. These may be caused by a genetic defect, or damage to the brain or central nervous system. Other causes are unknown.

Children with special needs may be assisted by medical treatments and technology for short periods or a lifetime. Following are resources that provide evaluation, treatment and other interventions for children with disabilities.

Typical language development in a child includes the following verbal milestones:

- By age 1: Children should begin to master words for things in their world (dog, milk, mama, daddy, hug)

VISION

The best way to find out if your child's vision is normal is through regular eye exams—shortly after birth, at six months of age, before starting school (age 4–5) and periodically as they grow.

If your baby can't make steady eye contact by two to three months of age, you should contact your child's doctor. Some vision warning signs for kids of all ages include eyes turning inward (crossing) or outward, squinting or fluttering eyes, dizziness or headaches, blurred or double vision, watery or red eyes, a white, grayish-white or yellow pupil, droopy eye-lids or sensitivity to light. MENTAL HEALTH

What Is Mental/Emotional Health?

Mental or emotional health refers to your overall psychological well-being. It can include the way you feel about yourself, the quality of your relationships and your ability to manage your feelings and deal with difficulties.

Mental health and physical health are very closely connected. Mental health plays a major role in your ability to maintain good physical health. Mental illnesses, such as depression and anxiety, affect your ability to participate in healthy behaviors. This can result in problems with physical health, such as chronic diseases, and can decrease a person's ability to participate in treatment and recovery.

Issues with mental health can have many different symptoms, just like issues with physical health. Questions can be asked, and tests can be done to help assess mental health, the same as with physical health. For physical problems, most people go to the doctor and get a check-up. They have their blood pressure, temperature and weight measured. They have blood drawn to check for issues with cholesterol, blood sugars, thyroid, iron levels, electrolytes, and other measures. However, most people don't go to a mental health professional for a mental health exam. In many cases, people only seek out a mental health professional after a crisis has occurred.

Maintaining good family relationships sometimes requires a lot of effort. Family conflict can result from developmental problems, stressful life situations or difficulties with the child's or parent's temperament. Also, severe family problems, such as physical, emotional or sexual abuse, usually require professional guidance to work through.

Behavioral and emotional problems with children are often categorized as conduct disorders. Children with conduct problems may act aggressively toward people and animals, destroy property, lie or steal and/or commit other serious violations of rules and laws. Many factors may lead to a child developing conduct disorders, including brain damage, child abuse, defects in growth, school failure and negative family and social experiences.

Without treatment, many of these youngsters are unable to adapt to the demands of adulthood and continue to have difficulty throughout their lives.

If you are concerned about your child's emotions or behavior, consult with your child's doctor. The following mental health resources may prove helpful. If experiencing a mental health emergency 911 should be called.

The OhioRISE program's child and family-centric delivery system recognizes the need to specialize services and support for this unique group of children and families. Aetna Better Health of Ohio (the OhioRISE plan) is partnering with Ohio Department of Medicaid (ODM), partner state agencies, providers, families, and other stakeholders to develop and implement new and enhanced services,

- In addition to all the mental health and substance use disorder services currently covered by Ohio Medicaid, new and improved services under the OhioRISE plan include:
 - Moderate and Intensive Care Coordination
 - Mobile Response and Stabilization Service (MRSS)

- Intensive Home-Based Treatment (IHBT)
- Psychiatric Residential Treatment Facility (PRTF)
- Behavioral Health Short-Term Temporary Respite
- Primary Flex Funds
- Children or youth who may be eligible for OhioRISE:
 - Are eligible for Ohio Medicaid (either managed care or fee-for-service),
 - Are age 0-20,
 - Are not enrolled in a MyCare Ohio plan,
 - Require significant behavioral health treatment needs, measured using the Ohio Child and Adolescent Needs and Strengths (CANS) assessment.
 - Children and youth may also be eligible for OhioRISE due to certain urgent conditions. For example, if a child or youth is in a hospital for behavioral health reasons or is admitted into a Psychiatric Residential Treatment Facility (PRTF).
 - If a youth is enrolled in a MyCare Ohio plan and has qualifying needs for OhioRISE services, they can still get access to the care they need. The Medicaid Consumer Hotline can assist with discussing options.

ATTENTION DEFICIT DISORDER

Attention Deficit Disorder (ADD) is a neurobiological disability that interferes with a person's ability to sustain attention or focus on a task and to delay impulsive behavior. It is not a learning disability, but a behavioral problem. Children with Attention Deficit Disorder are not unable to learn, but they do have difficulty performing in school due to poor organization, impulsivity and inattention. However, some children with Attention Deficit Disorder also have a learning disability, further complicating identification and treatment.

Attention Deficit Disorder is much more common in boys than in girls. Characteristics are chronic, with an onset before age 7. Some children have Attention Deficit Disorder without hyperactivity and may appear sluggish, unmotivated and are often labeled lazy.

Contact the following National Organizations for more information about diagnosis and treatment of this complex disorder.

EATING DISORDERS

Eating disorders occur when people have an irrational fear of being fat. Their behaviors accommodate an unrealistic self-image, which often stems from low self-esteem and other psychological problems. The two most common eating disorders are anorexia nervosa and bulimia nervosa. Anorexia is self-starvation. Bulimia is a disorder in which a person eats large amounts of food (binging) and then rids the body of that food before it can be absorbed (purging).

Although many teenagers are successful in hiding these serious and sometimes fatal disorders, warning signs include:

- Severe dieting with dramatic weight fluctuations
- Use of diuretics and/or laxatives to keep weight off.
- Running water while spending long periods of time in the bathroom (to hide signs of vomiting).

If you suspect your child has an eating disorder, seek medical advice. The following Local and National Organizations can also provide information about eating disorders.

BUILD RESILIENCE

Resilience is knowing that you are the only one that has the power and the responsibility to pick yourself up. - Mary Holloway

SUBSTANCE USE AND ABUSE

There is wide use of alcohol and other drugs by teenagers. Many youth will “experiment” as a rite of passage. Others will continue to use alcohol and drugs and could develop a dependency and be destructive to themselves and others. Children are pressured to try drugs at younger ages than ever before. Other lethal and illegal substances are abused. However, the drug most commonly overlooked is the one most commonly abused—alcohol.

Alcohol is a so-called “gateway drug” through which children first experience intoxication. Many young people drink to escape problems. Others use alcohol as a way to fit in with their peer group or to reduce their social uneasiness.

Marijuana continues to be popular among many young people, who falsely consider it a “safe drug.” Because of the substances found in marijuana, it not only clouds judgement, it can also have health effects on the brain, heart, lungs, immune system and sexual organs.

Inhalants are chemicals and poisons that are voluntarily inhaled (“sniffed” and “huffed”). They are often the substances of choice to abuse by preteens because they are inexpensive and readily available.

Hallucinogens (LSD, mushrooms, peyote), stimulants (crack, cocaine), depressants (barbiturates, tranquilizers) and narcotic analgesics (morphine, codeine, heroin) are mind-altering drugs that are abused to produce a variety of effects. The following organizations provide services and support:

■ Talking to a parent or adult about substance use. Convincing a Parent to Seek Treatment
www.americanaddictioncenters.org

Talking to a parent about getting help for substance abuse can be extremely intimidating. To some kids, addressing the problem seems like a betrayal of the parent's trust; to others, it might be a frightening violation of authority. One of the most important things to remember about addiction is that it can distort the user's sense of reality, hiding the true impact of the disease. Many parents may not be aware of the effects of their drug use on their kids. They may be so deep in denial that they don't realize how chaotic their children's world has become.

Listed below are seven steps you can take to make a conversation with your parent more successful, whether you're a young person who's still dependent on your parent or the independent adult child of an addicted person.

■ 7 steps to Talking With a Parent About Substance Abuse

1. Write down your feelings first. Before you approach someone about the topic of addiction, it's best to clarify your own feelings in writing. People with substance abuse problems are likely to get angry, defensive, or manipulative when they're confronted. They might yell or cry, and blame you for their problem. When you have your feelings set down in writing, you can turn back to those words when things get tough.
2. Get help from someone with experience in interventions. There are a lot of professionals who have experience at talking with people who are abusing alcohol or drugs. This kind of conversation is often known as an intervention. You probably have someone in your life who could help you arrange an intervention: a counselor, school nurse, coach, priest, or rabbi who can help you set up a meeting with a parent or refer you to someone who can act as an intervention leader.
3. Ask other relatives or concerned persons to participate. If someone in your life is abusing substances, it's likely that other people are affected too. These people might include siblings, aunts or uncles, neighbors, or employers. Any of these people could help you state your case when you talk with a parent; remember, there's strength in numbers.

4. Arrange a time when your parent will be sober. When you approach a parent about drinking or drug use, it's best to talk to them when they are clearheaded and sober. Talking to someone who's high, drunk, or hungover probably will not be productive.
5. Keep the conversation calm. It's hard not to get angry, upset, or emotional when you're talking with someone about the damage they're doing to themselves and to the rest of your family. But if you can stay reasonably calm and avoid outbursts of emotion, you'll be able to express your feelings more clearly, and in the end, you'll be more persuasive.
6. State your expectations clearly and in writing. Before you talk with a parent about substance abuse, make sure you know what your goals and expectations are. Do you want them to go to rehab? Go to an Alcoholics Anonymous meeting? You can work on these goals with the person you chose to help you in Step 2, then write them down in the form of a recovery plan or agreement. Other people in your life, such as relatives, employers, or spiritual leaders, can help you set these goals.
7. Get help making sure your parent follows through. People who are confronted about their substance abuse may promise to get clean and sober, and a lot of times, they mean it. But addiction is a powerful disease, and it's easy to fall back into old habits, especially where intoxicating drugs are concerned. You'll need at least one strong person to help you make sure your parent goes through with the promise to go to detox or rehab, and to follow up with them on a regular basis.

■ Approaching the Problem

www.americanaddictioncenters.org

It's never easy to bring up the subject of substance abuse with a family member, but in most cases, the person with the problem will not be the one to initiate this conversation. Whether your loved one is your child, parent, or partner, there are certain techniques you can use that will help to make this difficult discussion a little easier and less painful. By the same token, there are approaches and attitudes that should be avoided in order to reach your goal of getting help for your loved one.

LGBTQI+ RESOURCES

The Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual, Transgender, Queer, Questioning, Intersexed (LGBTQI*) community represents a diverse range of identities and expressions of gender and sexual orientation. In addition to these identities, members of the community are diverse in terms of race, religion, ethnicity, nationality, and socioeconomic class. This intersectionality — the combined and overlapping aspects of a person's identity — brings diversity of thought, perspective, understanding and experience. This complexity is important to understand as a unique and valuable aspect of the LGBTQI community that can result in a strong sense of pride and resiliency.

While belonging to the LGBTQI community can be a source of strength, it also brings unique challenges. For those who identify as LGBTQI, it is important to recognize how your experience of sexual orientation and gender identity relates to your mental health.

Although the full range of LGBTQI identities are not commonly included in large-scale studies of mental health, there is strong evidence from recent research that members of this community are at a higher risk for experiencing mental health conditions — especially depression and anxiety disorders. LGBTQI adults are more than twice as likely as heterosexual adults to experience a mental health condition. Transgender individuals are nearly four times as likely as cisgender individuals (people whose gender identity corresponds with their birth sex) to experience a mental health condition. LGBTQI youth experience greater risk for mental health conditions and suicidality. LGB youth are more than twice as likely to report experiencing persistent feelings of sadness or hopelessness than their heterosexual peers. Transgender youth face further disparities as they are twice as likely to experience depressive symptoms, seriously consider suicide, and attempt suicide compared to cisgender lesbian, gay, bisexual, queer, and questioning youth.

For many LGBTQI people, socioeconomic and cultural conditions negatively impact mental health conditions. Many in the LGBTQI community face discrimination, prejudice, denial of civil and human rights, harassment, and family rejection, which can lead to new or worsened symptoms, particularly for those with intersecting racial or socioeconomic identities.

Approaches to Talking to Loved Ones about Addiction

PRODUCTIVE

- Ask sensitive questions. "How do you feel about your life these days? I've noticed you're drinking more than usual."
- Use the pronouns "I" or "we." "I feel frustrated and sad when I can't talk to you after you've been drinking."
- Have a clear treatment plan ready. "We've found a good rehab program close to home; we want you to get outside help."
- Stay calm and compassionate. "I know this is hard. I'm here for you."
- Seek support from others. "Your brothers and sisters are here for you too, and we've found a counselor who can help all of us."

COUNTERPRODUCTIVE

- Make angry accusations. "You never spend any time with the kids anymore; you're too busy getting high."
- Use the pronoun "you." "You don't listen to me when you're drunk!"
- Make bargains that allow substance use to continue. "If you cut off your drinking by 7 p.m., I'll give you one more chance."
- Act judgmental or outraged. "You're being weak and inconsiderate; using meth is a crime, you could stop if you really wanted to!"
- Try to tackle the problem alone. "I can't handle this by myself. You and your drugs are too much for me to deal with."

For many families, the prospect of approaching substance abuse is so daunting that they would rather hide the problem than confront their loved one. It's important to remember that while it may be uncomfortable, facing the problem actually provides a path to healing and reconciliation. Denial only sets up further barriers to recovery.

SPORTS AND FITNESS

It only makes sense to encourage good health in children through physical fitness. Physical activity strengthens bones, relieves stress, wards off heart disease and high blood pressure and helps children maintain an appropriate weight. By participating in sports, kids also learn teamwork, cooperation, discipline and self-esteem; spend time with friends and meet new ones; and have fun.

SPORTS SAFETY

Traditional sports have never been more popular and more children are participating in new sports every day. With all this activity, injuries, many preventable, can occur. Here are some steps Grandparents and other Kinship caregivers can take to help keep your child safe:

- Get involved. Check qualifications of coaches and athletic trainers. Pay attention to your child’s medical needs and never pressure kids to play a sport they don’t like.
- Get a pre-season check-up. This allows a doctor to spot medical problems early and may prevent new ones.
- Train the right way. Athletes should always warm-up and cool-down and an endurance-building program should progress gradually and be modified for different climates. Remember to drink plenty of fluids.
- Use the right equipment and facilities. Inspect playing surfaces, be sure clothing and equipment fits properly.
- Play by the rules. Make sure athletes know the rules of their sports. Encourage teamwork and sportsmanship so that competitors have fun and stay safe.
